UNSURE? Then that's the problem. In an age when mainstream journalism seems to be dying faster than the latest iPhone battery, we're all being left to our own devices – literally – to sift through a vast “data wasteland.”

What happened to our once-revered and now often reviled media? How will you now filter the rumors, lies and innuendo piling up on the web and your latest hand-held gadget? (Bring yours to the event, by the way. You may need it to keep up.)

From the same unconventional mind that is inspiring thousands of college students to re-think cultural awareness comes a new, radical vision for how to keep you accurately informed amid the blogs, tweets and status updates.

Award-winning journalist Phillip Milano has flouted the media powers that be before with his taboo-busting “Dare to Ask” cross-cultural column and popular book/lecture “I Can't Believe You Asked That!” In this new program he uses biting wit and unyielding hope to confront one of our greatest challenges as he asks his audience to discuss a critical question:

WILL YOU BE ABLE TO SEE THE TRUTH, THE LIES AND THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THEM?
